The main difference between “Mil-Spec” and regular “Commercial” Paracord is in the quality control and type of internal yarns used. Mil-C-5040H requires that each of the core Strands are made up of 3 twisted ply Strands. The core contains a coloured Manufacturer ID marker for identification proposes

IMPORTANT: Not suitable as a climbing rope!

If you can imagine the brightest glow in the dark cord, this would be it. This has got to be the most vibrant glow around. The pictures do not do this color justice. A must see! The cord must be "charged" before it will glow by using a bright light source. Don't be fooled by others selling glow in the dark paracord. This is the real deal, made in the United States.

ALL ABOUT PARACORD

What type of Paracord do I need for my project?

The most common Paracord for bracelets is Paracord 550 Type III, but for elegant bracelets the more fine Paracord 425 Type II is also very suitable. Paracord 100 Type I and Paracord Micro 90 are perfect as an accessory cord, but these types can also be beautiful for baby & child bracelets. Type IV and V for the serious outdoors knotting work, Type IV is also being used for dog collars. Eventually your creativity determines the choice of your material!
